

Dr. K. Vijayalakshmi, M.A., M.Phil., Ph.D., is a dedicated academician in the field of English Literature with specialization in Postcolonial Studies. She completed her Ph.D. in English Literature from Madurai Kamaraj University in 2022 with a thesis on the novels of the renowned African writer Chinua Achebe. She holds an M.Phil. in English Literature from the Institute of Correspondence and Continuing Education, Madurai Kamaraj University (2008), an M.A. in English Literature from The Madura College, Madurai (1999–2001), and a B.A. in English Literature from MTN College, Madurai (1996–1999). In addition, she has obtained a Diploma in Gandhian Thought in 1998. Her research interests include postcolonial literature, cross-cultural studies, literary criticism, and cultural conflicts in literature.

Dr. Vijayalakshmi has contributed to academic research through journal publications and active participation in seminars and webinars related to English language, literature, and cultural studies. Her research publications include Cross-Cultural and Social Change (2018), Aftermath of Colonialism in Chinua Achebe's No Longer at Ease (2021), and Post-Colonialism in Chinua Achebe's Things Fall Apart (2021). She has attended several academic webinars such as Literature in Times Like These (2020), English Grammar and Articles (2020), New Horizons in Linguo-Literary Studies of English, and Innovations in English Language, Literature and Culture (2021). She also participated in the seminar on Cross Cultural and Social Changes in 2018.

As part of her research work, she completed coursework on Cultural Conflicts in 2019 and carried out a mini project titled Major Themes in the Novels of Chinua Achebe in 2021 during her Ph.D. programme. Her earlier academic research includes an M.Phil. study on Literature and Films (Literary Cinemato Trend or Poetic Cinema) in 2006 and an analytical study on Homer's Epic during her Master's degree in 2001. She also possesses basic technical knowledge of MS Office.

She is a member of ELSTA. And has contributed significantly to academic and departmental development. She has served as the Convenor of several committees including Budget Committee, Department Activities Committee, Workload and Timetable Committee, Nature Club, Magazine Committee, and Language Lab Committee. She has successfully handled responsibilities as Class In-charge for the English department and has consistently produced 100% results every academic year, demonstrating her commitment to student success and academic excellence.